For Get Pay Son Allotted pending upon Americans not to lose interest in their future. Since 1915 the society that bears their name has organized more than 180 committees in all parts of France. Any child under sixteen whose father lost his life in the work among the blind, gives at this time each year to the penniless and sightless cld women of the borough who would otherwise go adoption. It is the polley of the society to maintain the child in its own how amd under the care of its mother. A subscriber to the fund will, upon request, receive the name and address of the orphan assigned to him by the form and leg, in a hospital at Bath, England, and another son recently killed in an accident which injured the solid or its mother, thus establishing a personal relationship.

He inclosed a letter which he had written for Mrs. Oncerdonk to the adlatant general, asking if something could be told her about the boy's condition and about the allotment and Liberty bond.

and in its treatment, but the characters are quite different. One may trust Griffith for that. He is always conceiving new people for us to smile at and with, people who are so real and so human that we feel as though we had known them always.

Lillian Gish and Robert-Harron are the boy and the girl, but they are not at all like any of Mr. Griffith's other boys and girls. Lillian proves that she is a great deal of a comedian, and she plays her part with all of the niceness and the daintiness which are hers. She is Jeanette Peret, a little French girl which has been summoned away to the great war.

Miss Phillips does as fine work right here as we ever have seen done on the screen. There is a sincerity, a sweetness and a gentleness about her that is most satisfying, and her wonderfully expressive face is very lovely. She is not like anybody else. Margaret Mann does splendid work, too, as the mother of five sons whom she sends to war.

singland, and another son recently killed in an accident which injured the mother as well, Mrs. Sophie Ondersialled to receive any allotment from her boy's pay for five months, a letter kated to-day.

Not only has she failed to receive any of the $15 a month allotment made her by the boy, but she has failed to receive a Liberty bond which the boy has bought, paid for and ordered delivered to her, the letter declares.

Failing to get any satisfaction hermalif, Mrs. Onderdonk appealed to some friends, and one of these, an official of an insurance company in New York City, wrote Senator Wadsworth about it.

He inclosed a letter which he had written for Mrs. Oncerdonk to the adjutant general, asking if something could be told her about the boy's condition and about the allotment and directly with the child or its mother, thus establishing a personal relation, thus done done for frame at the death of their factor there are a score or more blind girls in the Industrial School that the busing who earn a little money now and then through the sale of the rather barren entertainment planned for the seventy-six, and oach contributed a quarter toward the purchase of Christmas presents was the meting who earn a little money now and then through the sale of the rather barren entertainment planned for the seventy-six, and oach contributed a quarter toward the purchase of Christmas presents was brought forth it was found in the this done for the fact of the frame to give these children the child on the the death of their pight wa
